THOMAS-HENRY, b. 3 March, 1845.

Lineage.—The precise period when the first ancestor of the family of Clifton seated himself at Clifton, cannot be ascertained. The most probable conjecture is, that either Roger de Poitou, or Hervey, the great grantees of the crown, bestowed part of their vast possessions upon their officers and followers, to be holden of them, or of their superior lords. One of these officers may reasonably be presumed to have seated himself at Clifton, and in conformity to the almost invariable practice of those times acquired his patronymic of Clifton, from the place of his residence. The first person whose name occurs on authentic record is

WILLIAM DE CLIFTON, who held ten carucates of land in the hundred of Amounderness, in the 42nd HENRY III. A.D. 1257. From him lineally derived, 6th in descent,

THOMAS CLIFTON, who was in the retinue which accompanied HENRY V. into France, in 1415. He d. in 1442, leaving by his wife Agnes, dau. of Sir Richard Molyneux, of Sefton, Knt., a son, his successor, RICHARD CLIFTON, of Rawcliffe, co. Lancaster, direct ancestor of

Sir Thomas Clifton, with Lord Molyneux, and several other Catholic gentlemen of rank, were unjustly accused of treason, in 1689, and all acquitted. He d. 13 Nov. 1694, when the baronetcy became extinct, and the estates devolved on (the son of his brother John) his nephew,

THOMAS CLIFTON, Esq. who m. Eleanora-Alathia, dau. of Richard Walmsley, Esq. of Dunkenhall, co. Lancaster, and dying in 1730, was s. by his son,

Lineage.—This family, as its name and arms imply, is of Norman origin, and deduces from the Seigneurs de Rohan, in the Dukedom. Its first settlement in England appears from an ancient deed from Whalley Chantry, bearing date in 1315, to have been in the northern counties. In Wales, the first settler on record was,

RICHARD CLOUGH, commonly called Hen, or The Old, from having lived during the reigns of HENRY VII. and VIII., of EDWARD VI., and of the Queens MARY and ELIZABETH. In the Harleian MSS., fol. 1917, entitled 3 Wales Ped., it is stated that he m. in the time of HENRY VIII., and settled on Llewellyn Green, near Denbigh. He had five sons and one dau. The 5th son,

SIR RICHARD CLOUGH, Knt., became an eminent merchant, and was partner of the celebrated Sir Thomas Gresham, who, at Sir Richard's suggestion, erected the Royal Exchange. Sir Richard built, in the year 1567, on his paternal estate, the mansion of Plas Clough, which is still in the possession of his lineal descendants. By his first wife he had a son and heir, RICHARD. He m. 2ndly, Catherine, widow of John Salusbury, Esq., son and heir of Sir John Salusbury, of Llewellyn, Knt. and dau. and heir of Tudor ap Robert Ychan, of Berain (who m. 3rdly, Maurice Wynn, of Gwydyr, co. FORD AND LYONS.

Maternally the present William-Henry Ford Cogan, Esq., M.P., derives descent from two ancient families, the FORDS, of Corry, co. Leitrim, and the LYONS, of Lyonstown, co. Roscommon. The FORDS were an old Irish race, the Mac Consamhas or Mac Consanavas, chiefs of the territory of Muinter Kenny, in Leitrim, frequently mentioned in the Irish annals, and referred to by the "Four Masters" "Their name," says Dr. O'Donovan, "is supposed by the peasantry to be compounded of three Irish words, signifying 'the son of the Ford,' and from this false assumption it is now anglicised 'Ford.' Certain it is, that the sept of Mac Consanavas was sprung from Falvan, 2nd son of Maí-mordha, Prince of Breffney, ancestor of the O'Reillys. In 1602,

GARRET FORD, chief of Muinter Kenny, was seized by Sir Frederick Hamilton, his wife slain, and his stronghold at Corry (a promontory jutting into Lough Sheelan) sacked and burnt. Several members of his family were put to the sword, and Garret himself was carried off to Manor Hamilton, and there hanged. Garret's son, COHAM OF COHAM.

COHAM, WILLIAM-HOLLAND-BICKFORD, Esq. of Coham and Dunsland, co. Devon, J.P., b. 28 July, 1828; m. 3 Sept. 1857, Dora-Elizabeth-Louisa, youngest dau. of Gen. Sir Hopton Stratford Scott, K.C.B.

Lineage.—In passing by the banks of the River Torridge, towards the parish of Black Torrington, Devon, the dwelling of Coham, with owners of its own name, comes in view. It is not known when its possessors did not dwell there, they having possessed it from time immemorial. The name denotes Saxon origin—aham, a Saxon word signifying "a home" or "dwelling place," surrounded by wood, water, and fields, just as Coham is situated; but the family can only prove their home at this place from the year 1547, and this proof from the aid of the Black Torrington parish register, where the following entry may be seen: "Margaret, daughter of Stephen Coham, gentleman, of Coham, was baptized April 4th, 1547," and this extract is from the earliest register extant in the parish-chest. We find this Stephen Coham, succeeded by Stephen Coham, the father of Lewis Coham, of Coham, Esq., living in the beginning of the seventeenth century. To this gentleman succeeded

LEWIS COHAM, Esq. of Coham, who m. 22 Dec. 1669, Mary, the sister of John Arscott, Esq. of Tetcott, near Holsworthy (who succeeded the John Arscott who m. Gertrude, the dau. of Sir Shilston Calmady, but left no family), by whom he had three sons and two daus.,

i. STEPHEN, his heir.

Grace, dau. of George Plunkett Woodruffe, Esq. of the Manor House, of Chiswick, by whom he had two sons and two daus., all of them married.

Lineage.—This family of Comyn, claiming to be originally a scion of the great Scottish house of COMYN of Badenoch, in which vested the office of Justiciary of Scotland, and on which was conferred the Earldom of Buchan, has been established in Ireland for many centuries. At an early period after their settlement in that kingdom, we find the COMYNS resident at Comyns Castle, in St. Mary's parish, Limerick, of which city a member of the family filled the chief civic office so far back as the reign of HENRY IV. From Limerick, the COMYNS passed into Clare, and became possessed of considerable landed property in that county. From Sir William Comyn, Knt. of Limerick, living circa 1440, great-grandson of Sir Laurence Comyn, Knt., lineally descended the COMYNS of Corcomroe, of whom a pedigree was registered in the office of Ulster King of Arms in the year 1748; and the COMYNS of Kilcorney, of whom we are about to treat.

GEORGE COMYN, the immediate ancestor of the Woodstock family, was protected from forfeiture in the Great Civil War through the intervention of his cousin, Sir Hardress Waller, the Parliamentarian. His son, Lineage.—The ancient Milesian family of O'Concanon derives its descent from Dermot, brother of Muria, 2nd King of Connaught, in the 9th century, A.D. 815, whose grandson, Conmor, king of Connaught, was ancestor of the O'CONNOR DON (see that family). The celebrated Cathal Crovedearg O'Connor, King of Connaught, was fostered by Teige O'Concanon, at Hy-Diarmada, the ancient patrimony of the O'Concanons, in the co. of Galway.

Frequent and honourable mention of the name occurs in the annals of Ireland, particularly in those of the Four Masters. At the great battle of Celsuinn, fought A.D. 971, Murchantach O'Concanon was slain; in 1168, Hugh O'Concanon, Lord of Ul Diarmada, a Religious, died at Clonmacnoise on the Shannon; and in 1478, Thomas O'Concanon, Lord of Ul or Hy Diarmada, was slain in a family feud. In 1585, Moriartach O'Concanon, otherwise styled "The O'Concanon," chief of his name, was one of the contracting parties in the Indentures of Composition for the county of Galway, entered into between the chieftains and gentry of Galway and Sir John Perrott, lord deputy of Ireland. During succeeding years, several members of the Concanon family obtained grants of lands in the county of Galway, and among others, Melaghlín and Edmond O'Concanon, of Moylagh, and William and John O'Concanon, of Coolowe. A lineal male descendant of this old and distinguished family,

Lineage.—The family of Connellan, or O'Connellan, as it was originally written, is of ancient Milesian extraction, and in Comerford's History of Ireland, is deduced from the great family of O'Neill, on the authority of the Psalters of Tara and Cashel, the great sources of Irish genealogy. This descent is further confirmed by a very ancient Irish manuscript (in the possession of the late Sir William Betham), in which the family of O'Connellan is made one of the branches from NIALL of the Nine Hostages. From Hardiman's Ancient Irish Deeds, No. XIV., it would appear that the family was seated in the co. Limerick in the middle of the 14th century, as we find that tribute of wheat and money was levied yearly off the lands of Lis-Connellan, proving the location of a family of consequence there, and giving name to the place; and in the same work is found (No. XXVIII.) that Siacus O'Connellan, in the same county, was witness to certain covenants in 1578. It is probable that their possessions in that county were lost by confiscation, as from this period we find mention of the family principally in Connaught, where they became seized of a part of the forfeited Clanricarde estates. As appears from public records in the Record Tower of Dublin Castle: "Donough O'Connellane, son of Shane O'Connellane, had a grant from the crown of an eighth part of the lower quarter of the lands of Rahassan, co. Galway, in 1619; William-Nevagh O'Connellane, of Rahassan, had a grant from the crown, 27 March, 1619, of half the Cartrons of Cahroane and Pole Idownline, and three-sixteenths of the lower quarter of Rahassan; and Gilpatrick O'Connellan, in the same year, had a grant from the crown of the other half of the Cartrons of Cahroane and Pole Idownline, in the barony of Kiltaragh, and co. Galway." Descended from this latter, was JAMES CONNELLAN, b. early in the 17th century; who m. Miss Graham, of the Montrose family, and was father of Lineage.—The family of COOKE, of which we are treating, was settled in Ireland previously to the reign of ELIZABETH, and obtained considerable grants of lands in that of JAMES I. It was a branch of the Cookes of Norfolk, and the family Christian names are still, after the lapse of centuries, identical, as Thomas; John; Edward; Robert; Joseph; William; &c.

PETER COOKE was resident in the co. Cork long before the war of 1641. He had four sons, viz., THOMAS; ROBERT; EDWARD; and PETER; all of whom were young when the war broke out, "Lord Broghill (WARE's Writers, p. 170) having had an interview with the Protector in London, hastened to the south of Ireland, where he soon got together a troop of horse and 1500 foot well appointed." THOMAS COOKE, son of Peter, was then a minor, and became one of the officers in that levy of cavalry. His son was not of age in 1666, as appears from his petition to the court of claims, report and schedule thereon dated 25 Sept. that year. In consequence of his minority and the death of his father, the petition was presented on his behalf by his guardian, John Sherlock, a name which still continues allied to some of the Cooke family. The petition is No. 138, in the surveyor-general's office, Dublin, and shows his claim to have been on the lands of Knockanare, in the barony of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, on which it was allowed. It is from him the family of COOKE-COLLIS, of Castle Cooke, in that county, springs. The next son of Peter was CAPTAIN ROBERT COOKE,* who advanced money on the expedition, as well as being in the profession of arms. By his petition, No. 170, in the last-mentioned depository, he claimed premises in the city of Waterford. EDWARD COOKE (son of Peter), from whom are the Cookes of Kiltinan Castle, co. Tipperary, claimed lands in that county, by reason of his having lent money on the expedition. The petition of this Edward is in the same depository as the two last-mentioned, and numbered 165. The remaining son of Peter, viz., PETER COOKE, resided at Tallagh, in the co. Waterford, and from him are descended the family of Cooke of Cordangan, co. Tipperary, and that of Cooke of Fort William, in the same county. The elder son of Peter, THOMAS COOKE, Esq., had issue, THOMAS; Peter; and Zachary. The eldest,

THOMAS COOKE, was a very wealthy merchant in the city of Cork. It appears, by his will, that exclusive of his landed possessions, he had extensive capital in trade, including many ships at sea, which he directed by his will to be sold. He was of the Society of Quakers, and his wife, Joan Harwood, whom he m. 29 Sept. 1661, was an English lady, and grantor of the Threadneedle Street charity. By his will, he directed that he should be interred in the Quakers' burial-ground at Cork. He d. about 1706. Dungalane, on which was an old castle, was subsequently denominated Castle Cooke. He was adjudged a traitor for adhering to the cause of WILLIAM III., and was attainted as such by the parliament held under King JAMES II., at Dublin, 7 May, 1689. He bequeathed his estates to his only son,

PETER COOKE, Esq. of Castle Cooke, co. Cork, who m. 23 April, 1666, Elizabeth Mitchell, and had two sons and one dau., viz.,

- I. THOMAS, his heir.
- II. ZACHARY, who s. his brother, Thomas.

* CAPT. ROBERT COOKE (brother of Thomas, of Lord Broghill's cavalry) had issue, ROBERT, known by the appellation of Linen Cooke; and William, of Youghal, who was a merchant. Robert, called Linen, was a very eccentric person.

The eldest son,

THOMAS COOKE, Esq. of Castle Cooke, m. Dorothea Addis, and by her left three daus.,

1. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Thomas Blachall, and d. s. p.
- II. MARTHA, eventual heiress, m. 22 Nov. 1750, her cousin, the Rev. William Collis.

ZACHARY COOKE, Esq. of Castle Cooke, who dying unm., was s. by his niece,

MARTHA COOKE, who had m. her cousin, the Rev. William Collis, rector of Church Hill and Kilgobben, co. Jane, eldest dau. of Peter Carey, Esq. of Careyville, co. Cork; Martha, d. unm. The elder son,

THE REV. ZACHARY-COOKE COLLIS, archdeacon of Cloyne, s. to the Castle Cooke estate, and assumed the additional surname and arms of COOKE. He m. in 1782, Jane, dau. of Charles Leslie, Esq., M.D. of the city of Cork, by Anne his wife, dau. of Alderman Lawton, of the same city, and had issue, WILLIAM, of Castle Cooke; Anne-Lealie, m. to Thomas Perrott, Esq. of Upland, co. Lineage.—JOSEPH COOKE, Esq., before-mentioned of Gurrangreny, son of Joseph, of Arraglin, by Anne Boyce, his second wife, m. Margaret Sheridan, by whom he had issue. Of this gentleman, there is a family tradition to the effect that the Whiteboys having, unnoticed, forced an entrance into his dwelling at Gurrangreny, in a lonely and sequestered part of the co. Tipperary, they tendered a book to him, and with fire-arms presented to his breast, required him to pledge himself to connive at their lawless doings in that quarter of the country. He took the book, but so astonished the nocturnal legislators by swearing hostility to them, that they retired in the greatest confusion without offering him any violence. Lineage.—The surname of this family was originally written Cooper, or Cowper. It is stated by Playfair, in his Baronetage, to be nearly as old in Scotland as the time of Malcolm Canmore. Sir George Mackenzie, in his Science of Heraldry, 1680, says, that the arms of the Cowpers "signify their descent from France, and from Bretagne, in that kingdom." They anciently bore fleurs-de-lis and ermine in one shield, although subsequently the fleurs-de-lis were changed to slips of laurel, as appears from Nisbet's Heraldry. The Cowpers appear as landholders, in various counties, at an early date. The principal family of the name was COOPER of Gogar, in Mid-Lothian, of whom the Lyon Register, and Playfair, both state that their first ancestor on record was Simon Couper, one of the Barons of Scotland, who was compelled to swear fealty to EDWARD I., in the year 1296, and whose name accordingly appears on the Ragman Roll. This family was raised to the baronetage of Nova Scotia, in 1638, in the person of John Cooper, or Cowper, of Gogar, who was killed in 1640, along with the Earl of Haddington and many gentlemen, in the blowing-up of Dunglass Castle, when that fortress was held by the Scotch army. From William Cowper, the 3rd son of the 1st baronet, the family now settled in Ayrshire claim descent.

WILLIAM COOPER, or COWPER, b. 1629, was an officer of dragoons during the civil war. He m. Christian Scot, and settled in the co. Dumfries. He had, with other issue,

Soon after his marriage, Samuel Cooper acquired the barony of Ballindalloch, in the co. of Stirling. COPPINGER OF BALLYVOLANE.

COPPINGER, WILLIAM, Esq. of Ballyvolane and Barryscourt, co. Cork, b. 9 Dec. 1788; s. his father 15 July, 1816.

Lineage.—So far back as the beginning of the fourteenth century, (ANNO 1319), we find, by the municipal records of Cork, Stephen Coppinger, mayor of that city, about the period, in EDWARD II's reign, when the chief magistrate of London first adopted a similar designation. This Stephen Coppinger's relatives and descendants long continued to sustain their local influence, as appears by the frequency of the name in the civic annals of Cork, and to spread themselves as large proprietors over the adjoining county.

The only vestige of the ancient mansion now left, is a square ivy-grown tower and gateway, which remain a pleasing relic of the architecture of the old times. The Cresswells appear to have been established in Staffordshire from a very early period, and to have ever maintained a high position among its great landed proprietors. Lineage.—"Workington (says Camden) is now the seat of the ancient knightly family of the CURWEN, descended from Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland, who took that name by covenant from Culwen, a family of Galloway, the heir whereof they had married. They have a stately castlelike seat; and from this family (increased vanity) I myself am descended by the mother's side." To

GOSPATRIC, son of Orme, and great-grandson of Eldred, 2nd feudal Lord of Kendal, Alan, 2nd Lord of Allandale, his cousin-german, gave High Ireby, which remained vested in a younger branch of the Curwens, which terminated in female heirs. This Gospatric was the first of the family who was Lord of Workington, having exchanged with his cousin, William de Lancaster, the lordship of Middleton, in Westmoreland, for the lands of Lamplugh and Workington, in Cumberland. Gospatric had (with four younger sons, Gilbert; Adam; Orme; and Alexander) his successor,

Sir Christopher's great-great-grandson,

SIR HENRY CURWEN, of Workington, had the honour of affording an asylum in his mansion-house to the Queen of Scotland, MARY STUART, when that princess sought the protection of England. Sir Henry, who represented Cumberland in parliament in the 6th of EDWARD VI. and 1st ELIZABETH, was s. at his decease, in the 35th of the latter reign, by his eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS CURWEN, of Workington, M.P. for Cumberland, father of

EDWARD CURWEN, Esq., who thus became of Workington. Mr. Curwen served the office of sheriff for Cumberland in the 3rd of GEORGE II., and represented Cockermouth in parliament. He d. in the 15th year of the same reign, and was s. by his son,

Mr. Cusack m. 2ndly, 10 Sept. 1838, Frances-Rothwell, relict of Richard Rothwell, Esq. of Hurlstown, co. Meath, and dau. of Rev. S. Radcliffe. Mr. Cusack, who was 24th in descent of the CUSACKS of Gerardstown, d. 25 Sept. 1861, and was s. by his eldest son.

Lineage.—Two early descents are given by different writers, of this family, one deducing the line from the Sieurs du Cusack, who are stated to have been one of the most ancient and illustrious families in Guienne at the end of the 9th century, and where there are several towns of the name; a member of which family is said to have come over to England with WILLIAM the Conqueror, his descendants afterwards going to Ireland with King JOHN. The name was certainly in good repute several centuries afterwards in France, for we find Charles Cusack summoned to a conference of the three estates of the realm, by the Duke of Normandy, to take measures for the release of JOHN, King of France, taken prisoner at Poitiers, and mentioned as one "who bore the principal rule in the city (Rouen) and a leader in all discussions of the estates," at which conference he made so bold a speech against the king's officer, that he was imprisoned; and in the year 1451, le Sieur de Cusac, one of the generals in the army of Count Gaston de Foix, besieged Bayonne, and was made a knight for his valour by the count. The other descent is given by several old Irish writers, who deduce it from Oíolló Oiliun, King of Munster, who d. A.D. 234; eleventh in descent from whom was Isog, ancestor of the Clan Isog, or Clan Cusack, of Clare, where they held, at a very early date, large possessions as a sept of the Macnamaras, in a very early rental of which family is given the number of silver ounces paid by the Clan Cusack as tribute, and where the name exists to this day. The Macnamaras bear, also, the same crest as the Cusacks. The name was spelt in several different ways, Cusac, Cusack, Cusacke, Cusake, Cusaque, Cussac, Cusack, Cuisac, Cuyzac. Without entering into the merits of the two descents, we will begin with GEORFFREY DE CUSACK, living at the time of the invasion of Ireland: his name appears in the early charters of St. Mary's Abbey, Dublin, relative to various disputes concerning tithes, and again as a donor of vestments to the altar of the abbey.

GEORFFREY DE CUSACK, Lord of Killeen, Gerardstown, Folystown, Clonard, &c. held under Hugh de Lacy, in Meath, and Tyrawley, in Connaught. Walter Cusack, a cadet of Gerardstown; and their granddau. and heir, Joan, marrying Sir Christopher Plunket, conveyed to him Killeen Castle, which is still possessed by the Earls of Fingal, Viscounts Killeen.

He and his brothers participated in the battle of Dundalk, where Edward Bruce was defeated and slain, and where Sir John and his brothers, Simon and Walter, were made knights on the field for their distinguished valour. From Sir John descended the subsequent Cusacks, Lords of Gerardstown, one of the most eminent families in Ireland.

ROBERT CUSACK, 14th Lord of Gerardstown, m. 1st, Margaret Porter, of Kingstown, co. Lineage.—The family of Dalzell is one of the oldest in Scotland, having been people of note for some centuries. The origin of the name is thus described in Nisbet's Heraldry: "In one of the wars of KENNETH II., one of the greatest of the early Scottish Kings, who came to the throne, A.D. 835, one of his chief favourites, and a kinsman of his own was taken prisoner by the enemy, and hanged in sight of both camps, Kenneth being exceedingly grieved that the body of his friend should be so disgracefully treated, offered a large reward for its recovery, when none would undertake the dangerous enterprise, a valourous gentleman said to the king, 'Dal Yell,' which in the old Scottish language signifies, 'I dare.' This attempt having been performed to the King's satisfaction, he was given for his arms the remarkable bearing, a naked man hanging, ppr., and Dalzell for his surname, with the signification thereof; 'I dare,' for his motto."

THOMAS DE DALYELL, swore fealty as one of the great barons of Scotland to EDWARD I., King of England; he afterwards enrolled himself in the band of worthy patriots who joined Robert Bruce; his son, ROBERT DE DALYELL, was knighted by King ROBERT II., but he afterwards lost his favour by remaining in England without his permission, and his barony of Dalzell was forfeited and bestowed on Sir James Sandilands, of Culter, who had m. He was brought before the public in this matter at the trial of the provost of Edinburgh for neglect of duty. He acquired the lands of Craigfoodie, Lingo and Girdenashall, in Fife, and in 1751, he succeeded to the estate of Ticknevin, in Ireland, which had been settled in 1707 on the male heirs of Sir Thomas Dalvell, of Binns, filling the proprietor's own descendants. Lineage.—This family, the name of which has been spelt in a variety of ways at different times,* is descended from a family which took its origin and name from the town of Dinan in Brittany. The first we hear of is Ammon or Hamon, Vicomte de Dinan, who lived about A.D. 970, from whom, according to Augustin du Paz, descended four noble families of France, viz.: 1st, the Vicomtes de Dinan, which branched off into England, of whom presently; 2ndly, the Lords of Combourg; 3rdly, the Vicomtes de Dinan, lords of Beaumanoir and Montflant, a branch which, after giving a Grand Butler to France in the person of Jacques de Dinan, A.D. 1427, ended in his dau. Françoise, who, though thrice married, appears to have died s. p. 3 Jan. 1493, just when the noble branch in England ceased also in the male line, and the humbler descendants began to emerge; and 4thly, the Vicomtes de la Bellière; whilst from the 5th, but illegitimate, son of the above-named Ammon, called Salomon, Lord of Guarplic, descended lineally, according to the same authority, the celebrated Bertrand du Guesclin, Constable of France and Castile.

Bertrand, Vicomte de Dinan, grandson of the above-mentioned Ammon, followed the Conqueror to England, and was rewarded by him with manors and lands, especially at Hartland, in Devonshire, of which place his descendants were lords for many generations, and great benefactors to the abbey founded there by Githa, mother of King HAROLD, in honour of St. Nectan. This branch became extinct in the male line by the death of John, Baron Dynham, K.G. in 1509, s. p. l., and his four sisters became co-heiresses. But a younger branch, descended from a younger son of Geoffrey de Dynan, who d. 5 EDWARD I. (1276), remained for many generations at Hartland and the neighbourhood, holding leases of lands under the abbey. Between the reigns of HENRY VI. and HENRY VII., family tradition says that two of the sons of John Dymant or Dymant, of Hartland, migrated to Barnstaple* and Tiverton in Devonshire, where they engaged in the trade of those towns, and became manufacturers of serges or kerseys, maintaining at the same time their connexion with the parent stock by purchasing, through the wool-staplers, the raw material of their trade, the wool grown by their relatives of the same name who remained on the land. Their names often occur in the annals of both the above named towns, as members of the respective corporations, or filling municipal offices; and at Tiverton they suffered severely during the Great Rebellion, both in property and person, for their loyalty. Both these branches, it is believed, have been extinct in the male line for some generations; that at Barnstaple, after an heiress had married into the Cholwell family about 1607, and another into that of Burgoyne, ended probably towards the close of the 17th century; and that at Tiverton, it is supposed, either in the person of "the Rev. Dr. Deyman, 40 years master of Uffculme school, in Devonshire, who died Feb. 23rd, 1739," but whose descendants in the female line are still to be found; or in an old gentleman of the name, who is said to have died at Tiverton about 1780, leaving no relatives.

Of the original family which continued at Hartland, and the neighbouring parishes of Morvenstow and Kilkhampton, two branches still remain. One has possessed and resided on a small estate called Brendon, in Pancras-Wike parish, co. Devon, for 250 years; the other was settled at its still earlier date at Flexbury, and afterwards at Maer, in Poughill parish, co. Cornwall, and is now represented by JOHN DAYMAN, Esq. of Mambury, co. Devon.

JOHN DEYMAN, of Flexbury, b. 8 Aug. 1691 (the eldest son and heir of John Deyman, of Flexbury, and grandson of Richard Deyman, of Flexbury, who was 5th in descent from Richard Deyman, of Fillam in Hartland, Devon, and 12th from Geoffrey de Dynan, temp. EDWARD I.), m. 1 March, 1715, Thomasine, dau. of Daniel Denis, Gent. of Poughill; and d. in 1741, leaving a son and heir.

JOHN DAYMAN, of Flexbury, b. 15 Dec. 1717, who m. 21 Dec. 1748, Barbara, only dau. of the Rev. Charles Orchard, rector of Coryton, and dying 17 April, 1793, was s. by his eldest son,

(by Eulalia his wife, dau. and heir of Abraham Barnfield, of Mambury) of Joseph Philipps, Esq. of Maer, sister and co-heir of the Rev. By the co-heiress of Philipps, Mr. Dayman left at his decease, 31 May, 1786,

DE LA CHEROIS OF DONAGHADEE.

*DE LA CHEROIS, NICHOLAS, Esq. of Donaghadee, co. Down, J.P.

Lineage.—The family of De la Cherois descends from the younger branch of an ancient and noble house in France, formerly resident at Cheroz or Cherois, a small town near Sens, in the province of Champagne, whence the name is derived.

The revocation of the Edict of Nantez, in the year 1685 compelled the De la Cherois's, being Protestants, to emigrate from their native country.

In the year 1641,

CAPTAIN SAMUEL DE LA CHEROIS (ancestor of the branch of the family settled in Ireland) served in the war undertaken by Cardinal Richelieu against the House of Austria. He left three sons, NICHOLAS, appointed a lieutenant of fusiliers by LOUIS XIV. in 1675, and promoted to the rank of captain in 1677; Daniel, and Bourjonval, both appointed lieutenants in their brother's company in 1677. In the year 1685, these three brothers fled to Holland, where they were received with great kindness by the Stadtholder, into whose service they entered, obtaining commissions in the Dutch army of the same rank as those they had held in that of France. In 1689, WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, being called to the throne of Great Britain, formed two regiments of the French Huguenots, of which Nicholas De la Cherois was appointed major, Daniel captain, and Bourjonval lieutenant in the first, commanded by the Comte de Marton. They accompanied King WILLIAM to Ireland in 1690, and finally settled there. The eldest,

MAJOR NICHOLAS DE LA CHEROIS, distinguished himself at the battle of the Boyne, and afterwards performed a very gallant action, making fifteen hundred men lay down their arms with only a subaltern's guard, for which he was presented by the government with fifteen hundred crowns and a lieutenant-colonelcy. DENNISTOUN OF DENNISTOUN.

DENNISTOUN, JAMES-WALLIS, Esq. of Dennistoun, b. in 1839, an officer in the royal navy, s. his uncle in 1855.

Lineage.—All the peerage writers and genealogical antiquaries of Scotland are agreed that this ancient family ranks with the most eminent in the western districts of that kingdom. It appears from a charter of MALCOLM IV., who d. in 1103, that the Dennistouns held lands on the Gryfe, in Renfrewshire. Here, it would seem, that one DANZIEL, or DANIEL, probably of Norman extraction, settled himself, and, calling the estate DANZIELSTOUN, assumed therefrom his surname.

SIR HUGH DE DANZIELSTOUN, of that ilk, accorded a reluctant submission to the victorious EDWARD I., in 1266. He had issue,

JOHN (Sir), his successor.

JOANNA, or JANET, who m. Sir Adam More, of Rowallan, and was mother of ELIZABETH MORE, whose marriage, with King ROBERT II. became a fruitful ground of controversy among historians. From this union, in 1347, sprang the long line of the STUART monarchs, through whom the Imperial crown has passed to the reigning dynasty. In reference to this circumstance, the proud proverb has been preserved by the Dennistouns, "Kings came of us, not we of Kings."

Sir Hugh was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE DANZIELSTOUN, of that ilk, who, during the reign of DAVID II., was the constant associate in arms of his illustrious father-in-law, the Earl of Wigton, and of the brave Sir Robert Erskine. Offices of high trust were conferred upon him; and the accession of his relation, ROBERT II., was followed by new honours, and by grants of many splendid baronies in various counties. He was for many years high sheriff of Dumbartonshire, and governor of Dumbarton Castle, the strongest fortress in the kingdom, and was one of the lords of parliament who concurred in the settlement of the crown upon the descendants of his niece, Elizabeth More. He m. Mary, dau. of Malcolm, 1st Earl of Wigton, who is lineally represented by the heir of this marriage, and had (with one dau., Janet, wife of Sir Adam Mure, of Rowallan) five sons, ROBERT, his heir; Walter, a bold and turbulent churchman, made bishop of St. Andrews, by ROBERT III.; WILLIAM (Sir), of Colgrain; Hugh; and Malcolm. The eldest son and heir,

SIR ROBERT DE DANZIELSTOUN, of that ilk, successor to his father as keeper of the Castle of Dumbarton, was one of the youths selected from the chief families in Scotland, in 1357, as hostages for the ransom of King David II.; and, in 1370, was commissioner for a treaty of peace with England. His dau. and co-heirs were,

MARGARET, m. to Sir William Cunningham, of Kilmaurs; hence sprang the Earls of Glencairn.
ELIZABETH, m. to Sir Robert Maxwell, of Calderwood; and from her sprang the Baronets of Calderwood and Pollock, and the Lords Farnham.

After the decease of Sir Robert, the male line of the family was carried on through his brother,

SIR WILLIAM DE DANZIELSTOUN, of Colgrain, co. Dumbarton, which estate, and that of Camis Eskan, in the same shire, he acquired before 1377, and had several other grants from the crown. His direct descendant,

ROBERT DANZIELSTOUN, of Colgrain, m. Katharine, dau. of David Semple, of Noblestoun, by Marion, dau. of Sir William Edmonston, of Dumtreath, through whom she had at least three separate royal descents, from Kings ROBERT II., ROBERT III., and JAMES II. They left, with other issue, ROBERT, heir; and JOHN, living in 1560, father, by his wife, Euphemia Bontyne, of WALTER DANZIELSTOUN, who, like his predecessor, resided at Colgrain. He d. in 1618, leaving, with several younger children, JOHN DENNISTOUN, who, by Margaret, dau. and eventual heiress of the ancient family of SPREULL, of Dalcurne, had a son, ARCHIBALD DENNISTOUN, of Dalcurne, minister of Campsie, who m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Humphry Noble, of Farnie and Ardardan; and 2ndly, Katharine, dau. of James Stirling, of Auchy. ROBERT DANZIELSTOUN, of Colgrain, m. Margaret, dau. of John Hamilton, of Ferguslie, and, among other children, who left no issue, had Elizabeth, the wife of John Colquhoun, of Camstraddan; Catherine, m. to John Macgregor, of Ardenconall; and his successor,

JAMES DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, who impaired and involved the family inheritance to a considerable extent. His son and heir,

JOHN DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, who, during the wars of the Commonwealth, continued a zealous and steady adherent of the royal cause, and ultimately crowned his exertions by the sacrifice of his life. After a short but romantic campaign, the little army assembled under the Earl of Glencairn was disbanded in the next autumn, when John Dennistoun was specially included in the treaty of surrender, and his real and personal estates were exempted from attainer. This benefit he did not long enjoy, but died in the ensuing year, after lingering sufferings, from a wound received in the Highland expedition. He m. Lineage.—This is one of the original Anglo-Norman families in Ireland; and it appears, by ancient records, and other authorities, that the Dolphins have continued to reside in the immediate vicinity of their present seat, Turoe, for nearly six hundred years. To Thomas Dolphin, the son of John of Goulbully (which adjoins Turoe), were granted the customs of Galway, by letters-patent from EDWARD II., bearing date 4th May, 1307. The Dolphin family suffered much, in 1460, by the war between Mac William Bourke FitzRichard, &c., and Clanricarde. It is stated in the annals of Ireland, that Mac William Bourke FitzRichard, and his allies, laid waste the country as far as Loughrea, and on their return, entered the parishes of the Dolphins, burning and destroying everything that came within their reach, particularly about Tulluban, which then belonged to the Dolphin family.

In 1585, Redmond Dolphin, of Rathreddy, as chief of his name, entered, with other chieftains of Connaught, into a composition with Sir John Perrot, on the part of Queen Elizabeth, for his property and that of other members of his family.

By an inquisition taken on the 16th September, 1617, it was found that the following members of the Dolphin family were seized in fee of their respective demesnes and other lands, viz.: Redmond Dolphin, of Rathreddy; James Dolphin, of Shanvallynamigardagh; William Keagh Dolphin, of Caherduff; Redmond Dolphin FitzPatrick, of Carnagard; Redmond-Oge Dolphin, of Bruckloonmore; William-Oge Dolphin, of Turoe, was seized in fee of Turoe and other lands; and Walter and Edmund were seized in fee of half an acre, in Turoe. By letters-patent, dated at Dublin, 27th March, 1619, all the several lands above recited were granted to said several proprietors and to their heirs, to hold the same, as of his Majesty's castle of Athlone, by knight's service.

During the Civil Wars, the Dolphins, in common with most of the Roman Catholic families in Connaught, sustained great losses by confiscations and forfeitures, which caused many members of the family to emigrate; however,

Lineage.—This family, one of the most ancient in Ireland, derives from CAHAL (Charles), 2nd son of Mough Molathán, a celebrated prince of the House of Heremon, and King of Connaught, whose eldest son, Enragh, was progenitor of the O'CONOR-DON, which Cahal, at his father's death, in 701, had very large possessions in the counties of Roscommon and Galway, and was father of Arlrigal, King of Connaught, a descendant of whom, about 936, built a castle at Ballydonelan, called The Black Castle, part of which still remains. DRAKE OF RORISTON.

DRAKE, COLUMBUS-PATRICK, Esq. of Roriston, co. Meath, J.P., representative of the ancient families of Drakestown and Drakerath, s. his father, 22 Feb. 1854; m. 9 Feb. 1858, Marcella Mary, eldest dau. of Andrew-Christopher Palles, Esq., son of Andrew Palles, Esq., by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Richard O'Ferrall, Esq. of Balyna, and grandson of Andrew Palles, Esq. of Mount Palles, co. Cavan.

Mineage.—This family and those of Ashe and Sharncliffe derive from a common progenitor, but the settlement in Ireland must have taken place at a remote period, for we find Drake of Drakerath, a distinguished person in the annals of that kingdom under the Plantagenets, Tudors, and the Stuarts.

The mansion of Drakerath was situated in the barony of Kells, in the co. of Meath (where the ruins still remain), and was erected by a member of the family of DRAKE of Ashe, in the co. of Devon, who acquired large estates in that part of Ireland, and settled there. Those estates continued vested in his descendants until the rebellion of 1641, when they were forfeited, but a small portion was subsequently restored by the Court of Claims in the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign. A cadet of the family, Captain Peter Drake, a soldier of fortune, who followed the wars through all the fields of Europe in the beginning of the last century, published a very amusing detail of his adventures, which he begins with the situation of his house at the time of the Revolution. "I was born," he says, "12 Oct. 1671. My father's name was George; he was eldest son of William Drake, of Drakerath, and married Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Patrick Stanley, Esq. of Marlstown, in the co. of Louth, and niece of John Stanley, Esq. of Finnor, near Slane, in Meath. The family remained in peaceable possession of the estate from their first arrival until the war of 1641, when, with many more, they forfeited, and were driven to shift for themselves. At the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign, there was a Court of Claims set on foot, by which a few of the proprietors were restored, and my father was of the number. He became, however, possessed only of a part, and was at the eve of being restored to the whole, when in order came from the king to dissolve the court, so that in end for that time was put to his hopes. My father had some time before this, with his family, settled in the co. of Kildare, having taken some lands from William, Lord Dungan (to whom he had the honour of being related) at Kildroughbet, where he built a handsome seat. Here he continued until the Revolution, when his affairs took a new turn. Some time before, or about the beginning of the troubles, Lord Dungan was created Earl of Limerick, and if I remember rightly, constituted governor of that city, thither his lordship repaired, taking my father with him, whom he soon after promoted. He was appointed one of the commissioners of the Customs, and chief comptroller of the Mint. As soon as King JAMES came to Dublin, he called a parliament, my father was put into the commission of the peace for the co. of Kildare, and declared himself a candidate for the borough of Navan. He was at the same time restored to the remainder of his estates, after which he returned to Limerick to fulfil his official duties. In June, 1690, he came to visit his family, and settle his affairs; but the loss of the battle of the Boyne (which happened July 1 following) obliged him with all expedition to move off with his family for Limerick, staying but one day after the battle to inter Lord Dungan, only son to the Earl of Limerick, who was that day killed by a cannon-ball, and brought to Castletown, the earl his father's seat. The melancholy affair being at an end, the next day we set forward on our journey. Arriving at Limerick, we found all hands employed in repairing the old, and throwing up new works for the defence of the place, which was now after besieged; the particulars of which are so well known already, that it would be needless to descend to minute relation."

From the Irish records it appears that, in the 9th of RICHARD II., the king conceded to RICHARD DRAKE of Drakestown, the office of high sheriff of the co. of Meath, and that, in the 9th of HENRY V., the same appointment was granted to John Drake, of Drakestown, to be his during pleasure. Among the other early ancestry of the family, Catherine, sister and heiress of Nicholas Drake of Drakerath, m. Richard Nugent, 2nd Baron of Delvin, living in 1428; and about the same period, Sir Christopher Barnwall, of Crickstown, lord high treasurer of Ireland, m. Matilda, dau. of the then Drake of Drakerath.

The immediate progenitor of the family before us, COLUMBUS DRAKE, Esq. of Drakerath, in Meath, son of Patrick Drake, Esq., was b. in 1670, and m. 1703, Ellen, only dau. of Patrick Jennett, Esq. of Oldbridge, co. Louth, who was slain at the battle of the Boyne, in 1688, together with all his sons, except the youngest, then in infancy. This child and his sister, afterwards Mrs. Drake, were saved in a singular manner, by a faithful servant, who secreted them in baskets, and thus conveyed them across the river after the conflict. Mr. Drake left at his decease (with five sons, Teresa, m. to Nugent; Mary, m. to William Cruise, Esq. of Mydorough; Agnes, m. to Curtis, Esq. of Mount Harrow, Elizabeth, m. to B. Clinch; and Elinor, m. to Peter Adrean) a son and successor,

The first ancestor that occurs in the pedigree is Henry de Erle, lord of Newton, in Somersetshire, 35th HENRY III., but the family was long previously settled in that county. So far back as the 7th HENRY II., John de Erle had five marks for the scutage of his lands at Beckington, in Somersetshire.

* The family of Drax appears to have been anciently seated in the county of York. In 1647, Col. Drax, Col. Modiford, Col. Walrond, and other cavaliers, having converted their estates into money, and not being able to reside in England under the usurpation, retired to Barbadoes, where Colonel Drax acquired, in a few years, an estate of £8000 or £9000 per annum, and married the daughter of the Earl of Carlisle, then proprietor of the island.

SARAH-FRANCES DRAKE, of Charborough, who m. 11 March, 1768, Richard Grosvenor, Esq., M.P. for West Looe, nephew of Richard, Earl Grosvenor, and that gentleman assumed, in consequence of his marriage, the surname and arms of ERLE-DRAKE. The issue were one son and a dau., viz.,

DRURY OF KNIGHTSTONE.

DRURY, THE REV. CHARLES, M.A., F.A.S., of Knightstone, co. Devon, prebendary of Hereford, and rector of the second portion of Pontesbury, Salop, b. 20 April, 1788.

Lineage.—This family is descended from the very ancient house of the DRURYS of Suffolk. The founder of it came into England with the CONQUEROR, as is recorded in the Battle Abbey Roll. He settled first at Thurston, and subsequently at Rougham, near Bury St. Edmunds, co. Suffolk, and his descendants continued in possession of that estate for about six hundred years or more.

From this house branched off the DRURYS of Havered, Suffolk, who built Drury House, in London, temp. ELIZABETH, the road leading to which has ever since retained the name of Drury-lane. It stood a little behind the site of the present Olympic theatre.

Of another branch of this family was SIR DRUE DRURY, who, together with Sir Amias Powlett, had, at one period, the custody of MARY Queen of Scots.

The immediate descent of DRURY of Knightstone is from JOHN DRURY, 3rd son of SIR ROBERT DRURY, of Rougham, Suffolk, b. temp. ELIZABETH. This gentleman became possessed of, and removed to Leviate Hall, parish of Ashwythen, near Lynn, in Norfolk, in the reign of JAMES I. His descendants, in the 3rd generation, alienated that property to the family of the Lord Keeper North. There is no trace that any of this branch of the Drurys again became possessors of landed estate, until the latter part of the last century, when

The Rev. JOSEPH DRURY, D.D., prebendary of Wells, purchased lands at Dawlish, in Devon, and built a seat thereon, called Cockwood House. James Dundas, of Dundas, was born Chief of Dundas, his father dying before his birth.

Kinrage.—"The Dundases," says Lord Woodhouselee, in the Transactions of the Royal Society, "are descended of a family to which the historian and the genealogist have assigned an origin of high antiquity and splendour, but which has been still more remarkable for producing a series of men eminently distinguished for their public services in the highest offices in Scotland."

The DUNDASES are generally believed to have sprung from the DUNBARS, Earls of March, who derived descent from the Saxon Princes of England.

COSPATRIC, 1st Earl of March, d. 1139, leaving two sons, viz. Cospatric, the 2nd earl, and

UTHRED, living in the time of DAVID I., who obtained from Waldeve, his father's elder brother, the lands and barony of Dundas, in West Lothian. His son,

HELIAS, had a confirmation of the lands of Dundas, in the reign of King DAVID, and assumed therefrom, in conformity with the then prevailing custom, his name and designation, while to denote his alliance with the old Earls of March, he adopted for his armorial bearings the ensigns of those lords, differing, as a mark of cadency, in the colours only. He was s. in the beginning of the reign of WILLIAM the Lion, by his son,

SERLE DE DUNDAS, who is frequently mentioned in the affairs of Scotland, temp. King WILLIAM. He d. early in the next reign, and from him we pass over nine generations, amongst the chiefs of which we find staunch adherents of Wallace and Bruce, to his descendant,

SIR ARCHIBALD DUNDAS, of Dundas. He was in high favour at Court, and had several confidential embassies entrusted to him. Some short period before the king's decease, Dundas received a letter from his Majesty, announcing the Royal intention of conferring upon him the Earldom of Forth, but the monarch's unexpected death in battle prevented the fulfilment of the promise. He d. within a short time afterwards, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM DUNDAS, of Dundas, served heir to his father in 1494. He m. Margaret, dau. of Archibald Wauchope, of Niddry, and had two sons, SIR JAMES, his heir; and William, ancestor of the DUNDASES of Duddingston, &c. The elder son,

SIR JAMES DUNDAS, of Dundas, had seisin of his estate 2 Oct. 1513. He m. Margaret Sandilands, of the house of Torphichen, and dying in 1553, left a son and heir, Dunne held office as clerk of the Ordnance, in 1852, and was Private Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, from 1853 to 1859.

Lineage.—The estate of Brittas has been time immemorial in the ancient family of Dunne, anciently O'Duinn, Chief of the name, and a sept of historic note. O'Heerin thus refers to it:

O'Dunn is chief of the conquering troops,
The mainstay of the battling spears."

The O'Duinnes occur also frequently in McGeoghegan, in the Annals of the Four Masters, and the other Irish authorities. The following pedigree is principally taken from the post-mortem inquisitions, and the Carew MS., No. 635, a collection of Irish genealogies compiled by Sir George Carew, Earl of Totness, when Lord President of Munster, in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH.

Families of Plunkett and Tregian.

The present COL. DUNNE, of Brittas, is, through his grandmother, Margaret Plunkett, one of the representatives of the distinguished family of PLUNKETT of Dunsoghly, as well as of the TREGIANS of Tregian, in Cornwall.

ROWLAND PLUNKETT, youngest son of Christopher, 1st Lord Killeen, temp. HENRY VI., by Joan, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir Lucas Cusack, m. Catherine, dau. and heir of John Berford, of Longhore, co. Meath, and was father of SIR THOMAS PLUNKETT, of Dunsoghly, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland, temp. HENRY VIII. whose son CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly, A.D. 1517, m. Catharine, dau. and heir of Philip Bermingham, and was s. by his son, SIR JOHN PLUNKETT, Knt. of Dunsoghly, d. 1504, a learned lawyer, who was constituted Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench in 1559. By Catharine, his wife, dau. of Richard Luttrell, of Luttrellstown, he had a son, JAMES, who d. v. p., leaving by Catharine, his wife, dau. of Sir Thomas Fitzwilliam, of Merrion, a son, SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, who s. to Dunsoghly at the decease of his grandfather, 1 Aug. 1582. He m. Margaret, 4th dau. of Sir Nicholas Bagenal, Marshal of Ulster, and was father of JAMES PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly, temp. JAMES I. He m. PHILIPPA, dau. of FRANCIS TREGIAN, Esq. of Golden, co. Cornwall, and left a son and successor, JOHN PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Christopher Roper, Lord Teynham, and was father of NICHOLAS PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Fisher, Esq., and had a son and heir, NICHOLAS PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly, who m. Alice, elder dau. and co-heir of Daniel Duinne, Esq. of Brittas, and was father of a dau. and co-heir, MARGARET, who m. her cousin, FRANCIS DUNNE, Esq. of Brittas, and was, by him, grandmother of the present COL. DUNNE, of Brittas, M.P.

The TREGIANS were an ancient British family of great account in Cornwall even before the Norman Conquest. FRANCIS TREGIAN, son of Thomas Tregian, of Volvedou or Golden, in Cornwall, by the eldest sister of Sir John Arundell, of Trehern, great-grandson of Elizabeth Woodville, Queen of EDWARD IV, by her first husband, John, Lord Grey, of Groby, was, in the year 1577, tried for recusancy and other crimes against the state. He admitted the recusancy, but denied the other accusations. He was, however, by false evidence, found guilty, and sentenced to perpetual imprisonment, his property seized, and his wife and children, and nieces, Adrian and Mary, turned out of his house. He continued in prison, in Launceston Castle, subject to every misery, and almost starved; the account of which is given in a note by Gilbert, in his Survey of Cornwall, vol. ii., p. 264. Those who got his estate tried to assassinate him, and he strove to escape, but being found out he was loaded with irons 90lbs. weight, and put into a dungeon. After some time he was restored to his former cell, or apartment. At length his wife obtained permission for his transfer to the Queen's Bench, but the officers who conducted him demanded 50l., a sum that he was unable to pay, and that he in vain petitioned the court to forego. He was removed to the Fleet Prison, where he was received 13 July, 1593. His lady lived with him in prison, and he had by her eighteen children, eleven being born during his incarceration. Most of them were alive in 1598, the date of the manuscript from which these particulars are taken. The last mention of this unfortunate gentleman is in the diary of the English College at Douay, where it is stated that in July, 1606, one Mr. Tregian, an ancient gentleman, after above thirty years' confinement, arrived there on his way to Spain.

He m. Frances, dau. of Charles Lord Stourton, by Anne, his wife, dau. of Edward, Earl of Derby, and had issue. Of his daughters, Mary, the eldest, m. Thomas Yates, Esq. of Berkshire; and Philippa became the wife, as already stated of JAMES PLUNKETT, Esq. of Dunsoghly. Of the sons, the eldest FRANCIS TREGIAN, Esq., was partially restored to his estate, but finding it impossible to bear up against the tide of persecution, he compounded with the Crown, sold his property, and passed over into Spain, where he was honourably and becomingly received, and raised to the rank of Grandee. His posterity are said still to exist in that country under the name and title of the Marquis d'Angelo.

This proposition he met, however, with a decided negative, adding: "Prisus frangitur quam fectur," a sentiment since adopted as the family motto. EAGAR OF KERRY.

Lineage.—The Eagers, settled for a very considerable period in the co. Kerry, are, in all probability, sprung from the ancient Saxon family of Aucher, the name of which occurs in old records, variously written, Auger, Aucher, Ager, Agr, and Egar. These Auchers, or Agers, derived their descent from Alocher, Elcher, or Aucher, 1st Earl of Kent, and counted amongst their earlier ancestors, Walter FitzAuger, a noble Briton, who flourished at the period of the Conquest; Thomas FitzAuger, lord of the manor of Losenham, Kent, temp. King JOHN; and Henry FitzAucher, who was one of the Kentish gentlemen who accompanied EDWARD I. to the Siege of Carlarueck. The transition of the name from Auger to Aucher, Ager and Egar, is shewn in numerous old authorities; and the addition made by the Irish branch of the a to the first syllable, thus rendering the word Eagar, arose obviously from a desire to return in some degree to the original orthography. The first of the Irish family was

ROBERT EAGAR, a major in the army, temp. CHARLES I, who had a grant of land in the Queen's County. He m. a lady of the name of Hamilton, and left a son,

Mr. Crawford therein states (giving his authorities) that the Echlin family are descended from one Philip le Brun, to whom "Rogerus de Mowbray, the great Baron of Dalmenie," &c. &c., granted a charter "de totis & integris terris de Echlin, in constabulario de Lindlithgow," &c., "to be held in fee and heritage of the grantor." The charter, Mr. Crawford says, is not dated, "but must be in the beginning, if not sooner, of the reign of our victorious deliverer, King ROBERT the First." Mr. Crawford goes on to say, that "this Philip le Brun, who first got the lands of Echlin, assumed a surname, as the ancient custom was, from his own estate, and became ECHLIN of Echlin, or Echlin of that ilk, and was the founder of the House of Pittadro, in the county of Fyfe, that continued so long a family of lustre and reputation."

Of these two last-mentioned brothers, Mr. Crawford says as follows:—"Both Dr. Robert Echlin, the bishop of Down and Conyr, and Dr. David Echlin, were eminently learned men. It is then the learned and ingenious Sir Robert Sibbald has in his view in the history of Fyfe. In a list of the learned men born in that shyre, he mentions the two Echlins Brothers."—(Mr. Crawford's Memorial).

Dr. ROBERT ECHLIN, on the death, without issue, of his nephew, Capt. Henry Echlin, became the head and representative of the family. "In the year 1613, His Majesty King JAMES the First of England," says Mr. Crawford, "calling to mind the memory and merit of the Laird of Pittadro, his father, and his long sufferings, was graciously pleased to promote Dr. Echlin to the bishoprick of Down and Conyr, in Ireland, the see being void by the death of his countryman, Dr. James Dundass." - I. Charles-Robert-Stebbing.
- II. Thomas-Willoughby-Norton.
- II. Helena-Augusta.

Lineage.—The name of ELVIN is one of the forms of the Saxon Æl, Eal, or Al, and in compound names signifies all; so that Elwin denotes an universal winner, gainer or conqueror, which is easily seen by a mere inspection of the two words which compose it, viz., Æl, all, answering to the Greek πᾶν or πᾶντο, and wyn, to acquire or gain.

This name is found long before the Norman Conquest, and we are informed that in the year 969, Alwin, Duke of the East Angles, founded the Abbey of Ramsey. Like many other distinguished Saxon names, it remained unaltered for many years after the Conquest, during which period well nigh all places of high trust were filled by Normans; yet still many modifications of it such as Elwyn, Elwyn, Elvyn, Elvin, Elwin, etc., are found.

A branch of this ancient stock now represented by Charles-Norton Elvin, has at various periods, intermarried with the families of D'Oyly, Fountain, Oakes, Bilham, and Norton of Toftwood, which estate is now held by Charles Thomas Norton, of Rickingham, a lineal descendant of Thos. Gyg, the founder of the well-known hospital.

EUSTACE OF BALTINGLASS.

EUSTACE, CHARLES-STANNARD, Esq. of Robertstown, co. Kildare, and Bally Doyle, co. Cork, heir male and recognised representative of the Viscounts Baltinglass, late a captain in the army; m. 8 April, 1843, Laura, dau. of Christopher-Thomas Tower, Esq. of Weald Hall, co. Essex, and by her (who d. in 1844) had one son, who d. in infancy. Captain Eustace s. his father 5 Jan. 1856.

In 1839, the late Rev. Charles Eustace having become male representative of the family, petitioned the crown that his right to the VISCOUNTCY OF BALTINGLASS might be acknowledged: his petition was referred to the Attorney-General for Ireland, who, having investigated the case, made a report thereon to Government, concluding thus:—

"I am of opinion that the petitioner has shewn sufficient evidence of his right to the dignity of Viscount of Balinglass, in case the attainder of James, the 3rd viscount, created by the act of Queen ELIZABETH, were reversed."

Lineage.—The family of Eustace, of ancient Norman descent, was established in Ireland by one of the companions in arms of HENRY II, by whom he was appointed governor of the co. of Kildare. His descendant,

SIR ROWLAND EUSTACE, Knt. of Harristown, lord treasurer of Ireland, son of Sir Edward Eustace, Knt., lord deputy of Ireland to Richard, Duke of York, was created BARON PORTLESTER, in Meath, in 1454. He d. in 1496, and was s. by his nephew,

SIR THOMAS EUSTACE, Knt. of Harristown, created Baron of Kilcullen, co. Kildare, in 1541, and Viscount of Balinglass, co. Wicklow, in 1542. His lordship made a settlement of all his estates upon the marriage of his son, SIR ROWLAND EUSTACE, 2nd viscount, with Joan, dau. of James, Lord Dunboyne. The elder son of this marriage, JAMES EUSTACE, 3rd Viscount Balinglass, having rebelled against the authority of Queen ELIZABETH in 1553, by refusing to pay taxes unauthorized by the legislature, was attainted by an act of the parliament held in Ireland under the government of Sir John Perrott, in 1586, when the immense estates of the family were confiscated, and the title has since remained dormant. His lordship's brother, and eventual heir, the Hon. WILLIAM EUSTACE (who had not been engaged in the rebellion), on the departure of Lord Balinglass for Spain, retired with his family to England, and, in consequence of the edict of pardon and oblivion, published by King JAMES on his accession, together with the confirmatory acts of parliament of that and the subsequent reign, is recorded in the Herald's College, London, as living as Viscount Balinglass, in 1610. His only son, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Ashe, of Great Forenaas, co. Kildare, ROWLAND EUSTACE, m. Elizabeth Bigland, a Yorkshire lady, dau. of Mary Strickland, of Sizergh, one of "the Maries" residing with Mary Stuart at the time of her execution. By her he had two sons, of whom the elder, James, died in early youth, of the plague. The younger, RICHARD EUSTACE, became representative of the family. He served as sovereign of Naas, and inherited the property of Ashe's Castle there, derived from his grandmother, Margaret Ashe. By Mary, his wife, dau. of Sir William Forster, he was great-grandfather of

CHARLES EUSTACE, Esq. of Robertstown, co. Kildare, and of Corbally, Queen's County, a lieutenant-general in the army, and member in the Irish parliament, only son of JOHN EUSTACE, Esq. of Naas, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Robert Groydon, Esq. of Russellstown. FARQUHARSON OF HAUGHTON.

FARQUHARSON, ROBERT-FRANCIS OGILVIE, Esq. of Haughton, co. Aberdeen, b. 26 Oct. 1823.

Lineage.—This family descends from the ancient and once powerful house of CUMMING of Altyre, having branched, according to numerous records extant from the parent stock about the year 1460. It also derives from the Ogilvies, Earls of Findlater, whose ancestor was brother of the oldest Earl in Great Britain, and brother-in-law of WILLIAM THE LION, having married that monarch's sister. The potent of the Earl of Angus bears date 1037, and he is still lineally represented by DAVID OGILVIE, Earl of Ardris. (See BUCKE'S Peerage.)

ALEXANDER CUMMING of Altyre, m. Janet, dau. of Sir William Fraser, of Philorth (progenitor of the Lords Falkland) and had two sons, SIR THOMAS CUMMING, his heir; and FARQUHARD, ancestor of the Cummings of Kellas, &c., co. Moray, who, disobliterated at the refusal of their chief to allow them to bury their dead in the family burial-place, and from other feuds common at that time, laid aside the surname of CUMMING, and adopted that of FARQUHARSON, as descendants of Ferquhard, from whom have sprung the FARQUHARSONS of Haughton and Balfing, in Aberdeenshire. This family of Farquharson possessed Kellas, &c. for many generations, and became allied, by marriage, to many of the best northern houses, the Grants, Inneses, &c. The 4th, in direct male descent, from Ferquhard, WILLIAM FARQUHARSON, alias CUMMING, of Kellas, m. about the year 1560, Jean, 3rd dau. of John, grandson of FINLAY MORE (progenitor of the clan FARQUHARSON), by his 2nd wife, a dau. of Baron Roy, of Kincardine Stewart, and had issue, who carried on the line. He was one of the barons of the north who signed a roll for the protection of JAMES VI. after the Gowrie conspiracy.

During the civil wars the FARQUHARSONS of Kellas followed King CHARLES I. to York, shared in his fortunes, lost their estate, were all but one killed in battle, and lie in the cathedral at Durham. The survivor,

JAMES FARQUHARSON, returned to Scotland, took up his abode at Monymusk, Aberdeenshire, and purchased the estate of HAUGHTON. He m. in 1656, a dau. of Donald Farquharson, Esq., 5th son of Invercauld, and left a son and successor, FARSYDE OF FYLINGDALES.

WATSON-FARSYDE, GEORGE-JAMES, Esq. of Fylingdales, co. York, barrister-at-law, assumed the additional surname of FARSYDE in 1825.

Lineage.—This is an ancient Scotch and Yorkshire family, deriving its name from the castle, lands, and villages of Easter and Wester Fawseyde, near Tranent, in East Lothian. The Fawseydes were seated at Fawseyde as early as 1253, when we find ALLAN DE FAWSEYDE gives an obligation to pay yearly out of his lands to the monks of Dunfermline quinque solidos argenti; in 1292, ROBERTUS DE FAWSEYDE swears fealty to EDWARD I of England, for his lands of Fawseyde; in 1335, WILLIAM DE FAWSEYDE, together with William de Lorraine, has a pardon from EDWARD III of England, for sundry raids and forays, murders, felonies, &c., committed in border warfare; in 1356, THOMAS DE FAWSEYDE, miles, has two safe conducts by EDWARD III from Scotland into England, to treat concerning the liberation of David Bruce, then prisoner. From this period frequent and honourable mention is made of this family in Scottish record. They were summoned to parliament; a Fawseyde fell on Flodden field with JAMES V. They were connected with the families of Malcolm Fleming, Earl of Wigton, and the Swintons of that ilk, and continued to hold the lands and castle of Fawseyde until the year 1644, when we find that those possessions passed by marriage out of the family into that of Douglas, Marquess of Queensbury. This is thus described in Douglas's Peerage of Scotland: "The Hon. William Douglas, of Kilhead, second son of the 1st Earl of Queensbury, m. 1st, Agnes Fawseyde, dau. and heiress of Fawseyde, of Fawseyde, a gentleman of an ancient family that had been seated four centuries at Fawseyde Castle, in the parish of Tranent, co. Haddington, by whom he had issue," &c., &c.

Prior to the marriage with Douglas, John Farsyde, or Fawseyde, a scion of this family, had come into England, either with King JAMES I, or a short time previously, and was made bow-bearer and warden of Pickering Forest, and had a lease of crown lands in Scalby and Hutton Bushell, and other places in Pickering Lythe, N.R. co. York, from King JAMES. From this person, the Farsydes of Fylingdales, and the Farsyde-Watsons of Bilton Park, are lineally descended, as shewn in the pedigree preserved in the College of Arms. The father of the present male representative, JOHN FARSYDE, Esq. of Bilton Park, co. York, J.P., son of JOHN FARSYDE, Esq. of Fylingdales, by Mary, his wife, dau. of John Watson, Esq., assumed the surname of WATSON, in lieu of his patronymic. FERGUSON OF CRAIGDARROCH AND ORROLAND.

FERGUSON, ROBERT CUTLAR, Esq. of Craigdarroch, co. Dumfries, and Orroland, Kirkcudbright, b. 26 July, 1855.

Kinrage.—The Fergussons of Craigdarroch,

"A line that has struggled for freedom with Bruce,"

are of very ancient standing in the sheriffdom of Dumfries, and the name is familiar to all who are acquainted with the minute history of Scotland. A Fergusson of Craigdarroch was one of the first that signed the solemn league and covenant; another headed a small handful of men who defeated a portion of Cromwell's army at Glencairn, 1590 strong, in 1651; and a third fell at the battle of Killcrankie.

The old castle at Craigdarroch was burnt in a border foray, and with it most of the oldest records of the family. The oldest paper, now in the family possession, is a charter of confirmation, granted by John Crauford, of Balmakew, in Glencairn, of the lands of Jarbruch and Mylne, to JONKINE FERGUSON, Lord of Craigdarroch, confirming a former charter granted by John Hutcheson, of Crawford, his cousin, and another charter granted by his son, John Crawford, of Dulgarrock, cousin to the said Jonkine Fergusson. The first-named charter is dated 1296, but the others have no date.

From the said Jonkine Fergusson to the present time, the descent can be traced uninterruptedly, from father to son.

From JOHN FERGUSON, of Craigdarroch, son and heir of Matthew Fergusson, of Craigdarroch, living in 1484, finally derived

ALEXANDER FERGUSON, Esq. of Craigdarroch, chosen M.P. in 1717, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Robert Lauder, of Maxwellton, and was direct ancestor of

RIGHT HON. ROBERT CUTLAR FERGUSON, Esq. of Craigdarroch, son of Alexander Fergusson, Esq. of Craigdarroch, a distinguished Scottish advocate, the hero of Burns' song of The Whistle. Mr. Cutlar Fergusson, who was b. in 1769, the representative of two very ancient houses, the FERGUSONS of Craigdarroch and the CUTLARS of Orroland, was called to the English bar in 1797, and for about twenty years practised with brilliant success at Calcutta. Returning to his native country, with a liberal fortune, and a distinguished name, he offered himself to the constituency of Kirkcudbright, and, after a very severe contest with Gen. Dunlop, was elected M.P. in 1826. He was distinguished by his exertions in the cause of Poland, for which a medal was struck in his honour. In 1834, he was appointed judge-advocate-general, and, at the same time, sworn of the Privy Council. He m. 17 May, 1832, Marie-Josephine Augu, and by her (who d. 1 Sept. 1858) had issue, Lineage.—Four different families of Ferrand are mentioned in the Yorkshire Visitations—the families of Cariton Hall, of Fleebby, of Westhall, and of Harden Grange. The three former, who in the early part of the 17th century had allied themselves by marriage to many houses of consideration, as the Tempests, the Blenkinsops, the Hebers, the Townleys, and the Percys, have now long parted with their original possessions. The last alone remains in its ancient seat.

In Dugdale's Visitation of the county of York, Christopher Ferrand, of Bingley, in Craven, is the first name of the existing line recorded.

ROBERT FERRAND, Esq. of Harden Grange in the parish of Bingley, 3rd son of Richard Ferrand, Esq. of Bingley, and grandson of Christopher Ferrand, just mentioned, bapt. at Bingley, 6 Nov. 1597, entered his arms and pedigree 11 Aug. 1665, at Dugdale's Visitation, m. Lineage.—This ancient family, than which few can claim a higher or more illustrious descent, derives from Walchellin, a Norman, whose son, HENRY FERRERS, assumed the name from Ferriers, a small town of Gastinois, in France, otherwise called Ferrières, from the iron mines with which that country abounded; and, in allusion to the circumstance, he bore for his arms six horses' shoes, either from the similitude of his cognomen to the French ferrier, or because the seigneurie produced iron, so essential to the soldier and cavalier in those rude times, when war was esteemed the chief business of life, and the adroit management of the steel, even amongst the nobility, the first of accomplishments. Henry de Ferrers came into England with the CONQUEROR, and obtained a grant of Tutbury Castle, co. Stafford. His descendant,

THE HON. THOMAS FERRERS, sheriff of Staffordshire, 20 HENRY VI, 2nd son of William Ferrers, 5th Lord Ferrers, of Groby, m. Elizabeth, eldest sister and co-heir of Sir Baldwin Freville, and inherited, in her right, Tamworth Castle. Sir Thomas d. 37 HENRY VI, leaving issue, Lineage.—The antiquity of this Saxon family is unquestionable, and can be established by Domesday Book, which mentions the family of Piscator (the original surname) as landed, and holding lands, in capite, in the time of EDWARD the Confessor and WILLIAM the Conqueror.

Nichols, in his History of Leicestershire, mentions, inter alia Roger Piscator de Cusinton, temp. WILLIAM the Conqueror; William and Walter Fisher, of Mountsorrel, gave lands there in 1332 and 1340, to the abbot and convent of Winton; and William Fisher, Clericus, was the 1st master of Wigton's Hospital, Leicester, where he d. in 1539.

The early pedigree of this ancient family having been imperfectly kept, we shall commence our narrative from the middle of the 16th century, when parish registers became general. The earliest register at Prestwold, co. Leicester, records the burial of ROBERT FISHER, Esq. of Burton-on-the-Wolds, 8 Feb. 1560. He was father of Lineage.—In the early adaptation of the cognomen or surname, that of this family ranges among the most ancient.

OSBERNUS PISCATOR, as the surname was first assumed, held lands in capite, at the period of the Domesday survey, in Sernelroce and Carleton, Bedfordshire, where his ancestor had held lands in the time of EDWARD the Confessor. In the course of the two succeeding centuries, among the branches of this parent stock, which had dispersed into other counties, was one established in Staffordshire, where Abnatis Piscator was located at Alderways, before the reign of King JOHN, and his descendant in the 6th generation, temp. EDWARD I, was Nicholas Piscator, alias Fisher of Alderways, from whom were lineally descended Sir John Fisher, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, who d. 2 HENRY VIII, seized, among other manors and estates, of the manor and advowson of Clifton, in Bedfordshire; and Thomas Fisher, who claimed Alderways, 17 HENRY VIII, two of whose descendants were created Barons, viz. Sir Robert Fisher, of Packington, in Warwickshire, in 1622, and Sir Thomas Fisher, of St. Giles's, in Middlesex, in 1627; but their issue male having ultimately failed, both titles became extinct. By the time of EDWARD III, the family had branched into the more northern counties, where William Fisher, in 1334, is described as of Beverley, in Yorkshire (from his branch, it is supposed, was descended the pious prelate, John Fisher, Bishop of Rochester and Cardinal of Rome, who was the son of Robert Fisher, of Beverley, and who, for maintaining his religious principles, was beheaded on 22 June, 1535), and John Fisher, in 1361, was presented to the vicarage of Urswick, in Furness, in Lancashire, then in the patronage of the abbey and convent of Furness. During the next century, the family was established in the neighbourhood of Cockermouth, in Cumberland, where John Fisher, about the time of EDWARD IV, was seized in fee of Borrowdale Grange, within the lordship of Borrowdale (which formed part of the possessions of Furness Abbey), which estate descended, 10 ELIZABETH, to John Fisher, grandson of Edward, son of John Fisher. About this period, temp. ELIZABETH, possessions, formerly of the Earls of Northumberland, in Brackenthwaite, in the same neighbourhood, which had been granted by HENRY VIII to Lord Grey, of Wilton, were conveyed to this family. And it appears that in the same reign they held lands in fee, by military service and otherwise, in Cockermouth, and the adjoining parishes of Embleton, Lorton, Bussenthwaite, and Crosthwaite, in the same county. John Fisher d. 21 JAMES I. seized of the estate in Brackenthwaite, leaving a son, John.

JOSEPH FISHER, son of Joseph Fisher, of Cockermouth, son of John Fisher, m. 13 May, 1783, Elizabeth, dau. of Josiah Shaw, of Kendal, co. Westmoreland (of consanguinity to the celebrated traveller, Thomas Shaw, D.D., regius professor of Greek, Principal of Edmund Hall, Oxford, and Vicar of Bramley, in Hampshire, where he d. in 1751), and had, besides other issue, a younger son,

Mr. Purcell-Fitzgerald, who is seventeenth in direct descent from Maurice, 4th Earl of Kildare, s. to the family estates, on the death of his mother, 30 Jan. 1855; and resumed by royal licence, Jan. 1858, the additional surname and arms of PURCELL.

Lineage.—For a detailed account of the origin and early history of the FitzGerald family, refer to the pedigree, in the Peerage, of the DUKE OF LEINSTER, its head and representative. Suffice it here to say that OTHO, descended from the Florentine House of Gherardini, was distinguished in England in Saxon times, and that his son, WALTER FITZ-OTHO, recorded in Domesday Book as the possessor of large estates, was appointed, by WILLIAM the Conqueror, Castellan of Windsor. This Walter Fitz-Otho had three sons, viz., William, Robert, and Gerald. The priority of their birth has been much disputed. But it is certain that Gerald was the direct ancestor of the Earls of Kildare and Dukes of Leinster, and of the FitzGerald, of Munster, including those of the LITTLE ISLAND. This Gerald m. Nesta, dau. of the Prince of South Wales, and their son, MAURICE FITZGERALD, sailed to Ireland in 1168, together with Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, and Robert Fitz-Stephen. They went, nominally, as the allies of Dermot McMurrough, King of Leinster; and this led the way for HENRY II's invasion and conquest of Ireland. The first title given to Maurice's descendants was the BARONY OF OFFALY, A.D. 1205; and the second, the EARLDOM OF KILDARE, conferred A.D. 1316, on John, 7th Lord Offaly.

The FITZGERALDS of the LITTLE ISLAND are descended from JOHN, the 4th son of Maurice, 4th Earl of Kildare. John's descendants at once settled in Waterford, and occupied a prominent position in that town till the defeat of JAMES II, at the Boyne, ruined the fortunes of that monarch's adherents. John Fitzgerald was s. by his son, PATRICK FITZGERALD, from whom the representation of the family passed successively to his descendants, JAMES FITZGERALD, and

EDWARD FITZGERALD: the son of the latter, JOHN FITZGERALD, was sheriff for Waterford in 1639. He was s. by his son, EDWARD FITZGERALD, whose brother, Richard, was sheriff for Waterford in 1650. Edward Fitzgerald m. 1st Joan FitzGerald; and 2ndly Joan Luttrell, by each of whom he had issue. Confining ourselves to the issue of his first wife, we have to notice three sons, of whom the eldest, William Fitzgerald, m. Anna Sarsfield, but his line became extinct by the death, in 1716, of his grandson, William Fitzgerald, of Blackhall. The second did not marry; the third son,

JOHN FITZGERALD, had by his wife, Joan FitzGerald, a son and heir, JOHN FITZGERALD, who m. Maria Woodcock, and had by her,

RICHARD FITZGERALD, who m. 1st, Maria Browne, and by her had issue, John, who d. unm.; Margaret m. Luke Hore, Esq. He m. 2ndly, Francisca Xaveria, dau. of Nicholas Wyse, of St. John's Priory, Esq., and had by her, ten sons, and three daus. Mr. Richard Fitzgerald was sheriff of Waterford in 1687. His eldest son, by his 2nd marriage,

NICHOLAS FITZGERALD, m. Isabella Aymer, and was elected, 7 May, 1689, to represent the city of Waterford, in King JAMES's second parliament. In the same year he was appointed (with the Earl of Tyrone and others) a member of the corporation, nominated by JAMES II, and of which his father, Richard Fitzgerald, was appointed mayor. On the 2nd of June, 1690, he joined King JAMES II's army as 1st Lieut.-col. of horse, and was killed at the battle of the Boyne, 1st July, 1690. He left three sons. Richard m. Rebecca, only child of Thomas Grove, Esq. of Worcester; Thomas and George, and one dau. Elizabeth, m. Anthony Colclough, Esq. of Ross Garland, co. Wexford. In default of any further direct issue, the line was carried on by

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Esq. of Waterford (10th son of Richard Fitzgerald, by Frances Xaveria, dau. of Nicholas Wyse, Esq. of St. John's Priory). He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of C. Browne, Esq., and by her had John and Xaveria. By his 2nd wife, Elizabeth Rochford, he had Edward, m. the relict of George Fitzgerald, Esq.; David m. Miss Emond. By his 3rd wife, Mary, dau. of Thomas Power, Esq. of Clashmore, Waterford, he had no issue. He d. in 1736, and was s. by his son, by his 1st wife, Family of Purcell.

This family descends in a direct line from the old and distinguished race—the PURCELLS BARONS OF LOUGHMOE, co. Tipperary. Originally of Norman extraction, the first of the name who settled in England was a soldier of the CONQUEST; and the first in Ireland, one of the companions of HENRY II, in his expedition to that country in 1172. Within less than a century after, as Sir James Ware, in his Antiquities of Ireland, relates, Sir HUGH PURCELL, Knt., founded the Convent of Franciscan Friars, at Waterford, and was there buried. When James Butler, the 1st Earl of Ormonde, was authorized, as Count Palatine of Tipperary, to create Palatine Barons, he included amongst them PURCELL of Loughmoe; and thenceforward, the Barons of Loughmoe ranked high on the roll of local aristocracy, intermarrying with the Butlers of Ormonde, and other distinguished houses.

FORBES OF CULLODEN.

FORBES, ARTHUR, Esq. of Culloden House, co. Inverness, D.L., b. 25 Jan. 1819; s. his father, 28 Nov. 1840; m. 28 Aug. 1849, Louisa-Sarah-Georgiana, 2nd dau. of Alexander Warrand, Esq. of Warrandfield, and grand-dau. of the late Hugh-Robert Duff, Esq. of Muirtown, and has issue,

ii. Emily-Mary-Jane.

Lineage.—The founder of the Culloden family was DUNCAN FORBES, M.P., descended paternally from the family of Lord Forbes, through that of Tolquhon, and maternally from that of Keith, Earl Marischall (as a narrative in the handwriting of the President's Father informs us). He purchased the barony of Culloden from the Laird of Mackintosh in 1626. Duncan had two brothers, JOHN, whose son Malcolm became Marquis of Montilly, in France; and PATRICK (commonly called Black Patrick, baille of Inverurie), from whom descended the family of Forbes, of Foveran. Duncan Forbes d. 14 Oct. 1654, aged eighty-two. By his marriage with Janet, eldest dau. of James Forbes, of Corsinday (a family also descended from that of Lord Forbes), Duncan had with two daus., Elizabeth, m. to William Bailie, of Duncane; and Anna, m. 1st, to Evan Macpherson, of Cluny, and 2ndly, to Alexander Mackintosh, of Connedge, three sons; JOHN, his heir; James (Capt.) of Calthness; and Duncan (Capt.) of Assynt. The eldest son, JOHN FORBES, of Culloden, M.P., m. 1643, Anna, eldest dau. of Alexander Dunbar, of Grange, by his first wife, Jean Campbell, dau. of Sir John Campbell, of Cawdor (a family since raised to the Earldom of Cawdor), and by the said Anna had six sons and two daus., viz., i. DUNCAN, his heir; ii. David (Sir), of Newhall, one of the Judges of the Court of Session, an eminent lawyer and man of letters, an influential patron of Allan Ramsay; iii. Thomas; iv. Alexander, who went to New England; v. Jonathan, M.D., of Elgin; vi. John (Lieut.-col.), of Pitcairneffe; i. Jean, m. to Sir Robert Munro; and ii. Naomi, m. to Robert Dunbar, of Burgie. John Forbes was provost of Inverness, (we believe M.P. for the county) and the friend and coadjutor of the Marquis of Argyll. He d.

about the year of the Revolution, 1688, and was s. by his eldest son,

DUNCAN FORBES, of Culloden, who m. 1668, Mary, dau. of Sir Robert Innes, of that ilk. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN, his heir, b. about the year 1672, and DUNCAN, afterwards lord president, and seven daus. The eldest, Jean, was m. to Sir Harry Innes of that ilk; the 2nd, Anna, to Peter Forbes, of Phylins, in Asynt; the 3rd, Mary, (contract dated 1698), to Robert Urquhart, of Burdsyards; the 4th, Margaret (contract dated 1699), to George Munro, of Newmore; the 5th, Isobell, to Fraser, of Achnagairn; the 6th, Naomi, to Dr. Alexander Paterson, of Inverness; and the 7th, Grizell (contract dated 21 April, 1709), to David Rose, of Kindecade. Duncan Forbes latterly served in Parliament, for the co. of Nairn, and d. in 1704. He was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, of Culloden, M.P. for Inverness-shire. He m. 1699, Jean, dau. of Sir Robert Gordon, of Gordonstone, by Margaret, his wife, eldest dau. of William, Lord Forbes, and dying without issue in the year 1734, was s. by the Lord Advocate of Scotland, his only brother,

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE DUNCAN FORBES, 5th laird of Culloden, the celebrated Lord President of the Court of Session, a man whose lofty character and eminent, but unrequited services, at a crisis of great national difficulty and gloom, are recorded by a grateful country, in some of the fairest pages of her chequered history. Of this ever memorable man the poet Thomson thus speaks:

"Thee, Forbes, too, whom every worth attends,
As truth sincere, as weeping friendship kind;
Thee truly generous, and in silence great,
Thy country feels through her reviving arts,
Plann'd by thy wisdom, by thy soul inform'd;
And seldom has she known a friend like thee."

Duncan Forbes, who was b. at Buncrrew, one of the family seats near Inverness, 10 Nov. 1685, m. Mary, dau. of Hugh Rose, of the ancient family of Kilravock, in Nairnshire, and dying 10 Dec. 1747, was s. by his only child,

JOHN FORBES, Esq. of Culloden, the intimate friend of Thomson, Armstrong, and other wits and literati of his day. He served with great distinction at the battles of Fontenoy and Culloden. At the former, his horse was shot under him. By economy and judicious management he succeeded in retrieving the fortunes of his family, which had received a severe and wellnigh fatal shock from the serious extent of his father the President's losses and advances in the cause of government during the rebellion of 1745-6, losses and advances never suitably acknowledged in the proper quarter, an ingratitude still the wonder and reproach of the age. He m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Sir Arthur Forbes, Bart. of Craigievar, by whom he had two sons, Duncan, who d. in youth, and ARTHUR, his heir; and 2ndly, in 1772, Jane, dau. of Captain Forbes, of New, by whom, (who m. afterwards, Grant, of Drumminner, Aberdeenshire) he had no issue. John Forbes d. 26 Sept. 1772, and was s. by his only surviving son,

ARTHUR FORBES, Esq. of Culloden, b. 15 Feb. 1760, who m. 1st, in 1779, Sarah, dau. and sole heir of Edward Stratton, Esq. of Kent, and of Ripley in Surrey. By this lady who d. at Culloden House, 19 Nov. 1793, aged 36, he had one son and one dau., viz.,

DUNCAN GEORGE, his heir.

York Rifles, b. 7 May, 1821; and Joseph-William, b. 3 Nov. 1827, who m. 21 Dec. 1849, Sarah, eldest dau. of D. Dallas, Esq., and has issue, Duncan-George, b. 5 Feb. 1851, Joseph-Harding, b. 23 Nov. 1854, and Sarah-Walker. Mr. Forbes d. 28 Nov. 1840.

Mr. Dingwall-Fordyce, a deputy-lieut. for co. Aberdeen, s. his brother 30 Dec. 1843. He represented the city of Aberdeen in parliament from 1847 to 1852.

Lineage.—This family derives its descent on the side of the Dingwalls, from the Highland Clan of that name in Ross-shire, of whom the lairds of Kildun and Strabroke, were chief. Some of these came to Buchan, in Aberdeen-shire about the beginning of the 16th century, and settled there, apparently with the view of escaping from the interminable feuds of their own part of the country. The first of these, of whom there are authentic accounts, as ancestors of the families of Culsh and Brucklay, is WILLIAM DINGWALL, of Sealscrook, parish of Monquhitter, co. of Aberdeen, who was b. about 1590. He m. Barbara Barclay and by her had three sons; Arthur; George; and John. The eldest of these, and the only one who left issue, was,

ARTHUR DINGWALL, who was b. about 1620, and in 1642, m. Lucrece, dau. of John Irvine, of Brucklay, one of the old and well known family of Irvine, of Drum, Aberdeenshire. This ARTHUR DINGWALL (1st of Brucklay) died in 1707, and his wife Lucrece Irvine, in 1717. They had four sons and three daus., viz.,

III. Arthur, of Brownhill, afterwards alluded to

IV. Adam.

I. Barbara.

II. Isobel.

III. Helen.

The oldest son,

WILLIAM DINGWALL, Esq. of Brucklay, b. in 1645; d. in 1733, having m. in 1711, Anna, dau. of John Gordon, of Nethermuir. They had six sons and three daus., viz.,

I. George.

III. Alexander.

IV. JOHN.

V. Arthur.

II. Lucretia, married her cousin-german, William Dingwall, as afterwards alluded to.

Of these,

WILLIAM DINGWALL, surgeon in the army, s. to Brucklay, on his father's death, in 1733. He was b. in 1721, and d. in 1801, having never been married. He was s. by his brother,

A few years before his death, viz., in 1807, he entailed his lands of Brucklay, Artamford, &c., on his grand-nephew, JOHN DINGWALL, and a series of heirs his personal property, amounting to a very large sum being vested in trustees, for the purchase of other lands in England or Scotland, to be entailed on the same series.

These consisted in the first place, of the descendants of his sister Lucretia, and her husband William Dingwall, writer in Edinburgh, who was also her cousin-german, being the 3rd son of Arthur Dingwall of Brownhill; and in the second place, of the descendants of the same William Dingwall by his second marriage in 1744, with Jane Fordyce, of Culsh, heiress of entail of her brother William Fordyce, of Culsh, and dau. of John Fordyce, of Gask and Culsh, by Lillias, dau. of William Lindsay, of Culsh, one of the Dowhill branch of the noble House of Balcarnea &c. Lives of the Lindsays, by Lord Lindsay, vol. 1, p. 316.

By the death without issue, in 1840, of John Dingwall (who s. to Brucklay in 1833, on the death of his father John, the first institute of entail,) the first series of heirs, descendants of Lucretia Dingwall, became extinct, save which,

ARTHUR DINGWALL FORDYCE, Esq. of Culsh, the representative of the second series of heirs, descendants of William Dingwall by his second marriage with Jane Fordyce of Culsh, was called to the succession. He was b. in 1797, m. in 1822, his cousin Jessie, dau. of Captain Arthur Dingwall Fordyce, of the Bengal Engineers, s. to Culsh, on the death of his grandfather (Commissionary of Aberdeen) in 1834, and to Brucklay, as already noticed, in 1840. He d. s. p. 30 Dec. 1843, and was s. by his brother the present proprietor. This gentleman's grandfather,

ARTHUR DINGWALL FORDYCE, Esq. of Culsh, LL.D., advocate in Aberdeen, and last judge of the Commissary or Consistorial Court there, was son of William Dingwall and Jean Fordyce of Culsh. He was b. 8 Dec. 1743; m. 14 June, 1770, Janet, sixth dau. of James Morrison, of Eldick, provost of Aberdeen, and by her (who d. 15 July, 1801) he issue, FOSBROOKE OF SHARDLOW AND RAVENSTONE.

FOSBROOKE, LEONARD, Esq. of Ravenstone Hall, co. Derby, barrister-at-law, s. his father in 1830; m. Anne-Eliza, eldest dau. of Mr. Lewin, and has a son, LEONARD, b. 6 July, 1860.

Lineage.—The FOSBROOKES, who are supposed to have derived their surname and origin from Fosbrooke, in Staffordshire, were settled at Cranford, in Northamptonshire, early in the reign of RICHARD II. where they acquired and for several centuries possessed, considerable estates. These lands were alienated some time in the reign of CHARLES II. and about the same period the more immediate ancestors of this branch of the family settled at Shardlow, co. Derby.

JOHN FOSBROOKE was seized of lands in Barton Seagrave, Randa, and Cranford, and, as patron, presented to the living of Cranford in the year 1391. His widow, Margaret, also presented to the same living in 1403. They had a son,

JOHN FOSBROOKE, who m. Maude, a lady of the noble house of Stafford, who was dry nurse to King HENRY V. and left at his decease (5 HEN. V. A.D. 1418) a son, RICHARD FOSBROOKE, m. Juliana, dau. of William Kinsman, of Loddington, co. Northampton; and d. in the 33rd HENRY VIII. A.D. 1541, leaving a son, John, then only sixteen years of age. Through this son the Fosbrookes were continued at Cranford for four generations further, in the last of which, there being no son to inherit, but a family of seven daus., (Barl M.S. No. 1553, fo. 38), the estates were sold.

From HENRY FOSBROOKE the younger brother of the above-mentioned Richard, the Fosbrookes of Shardlow are descended. He settled in the town of Nottingham, and of that place was sheriff, in the 35th HENRY VIII. A.D. 1543-4, and afterwards mayor, first in the 2nd ELIZABETH, A.D. 1559-60, and again in the 8th ELIZABETH, A.D. 1565-6.

In the year 1641 we find Leonard Fosbrooke and Robert Fosbrooke of Nottingham, gentlemen, lessees, under the Earl of Huntingdon, of Wilne Ferry, on the River Trent, adjoining to the parish of Shardlow.

LEONARD FOSBROOKE of Wilne Ferry, aforesaid, about the year 1670 purchased an estate at Shardlow. His grandson,

He was engaged in the rebellion of 1715, commanding the English part of the rebel forces. His estates were forfeited for the part he took in this rebellion, and were granted to Lord Crew, Bishop of Durham, who had m. Dorothy Foster, the aunt of the said John Foster. In 1715, he surrendered together with Lord Derwentwater and others, and was sent to London, and committed to Newgate on the charge of high treason, whence he afterwards escaped and fled to the Continent. He died, leaving no male representative of this branch of the family, but the descent is traced in the Harl. FOX OF FOX HALL.

FOX, RICHARD-EDWARD, Esq. of Fox Hall, co. Longford, b. 28 Nov. 1846.

Lineage.—The descent of this family (anciently O'Ca'harry) from NIALL of the nine hostages, monarch of all Ireland, is clearly traced in a M.S. in Trinity College, Dublin, translated in the Irish Archaeological Miscellany. The pedigree is brought down to 1526, and it is taken up again in 1563 in the family muniments of title. This family claims to be the eldest branch of the O'Ca'harrys, afterwards changed to Sionnach, or Fox. The arms, borne for many centuries of two crowns and sceptre, indicate a royal descent, and are not the arms of any other family of the name, either in England or Ireland. A seal ring, of pure gold, bearing the same arms, and evidently of great antiquity, was dug up some years in some ancient ruins in Trim, and given to a member of this family.
